The Niagara Falls Tunnel.

For nearly two years a small army of men have been delving away at Niagara Falls day and night away down in the bowels of the earth blasting away great masses of rock with dynamite, then loosening them up with picks and loading the material in cars to be carried away to the surface. On Oct. 4, 1890, the great Niagara Falls tunnel was begun, and on Oct. 4, 1892, this army will have forced a passage-way 6,000 feet in length through solid rock which for ages has held back the torrents of the Niagara River. This will leave only 1,000 feet to be blasted to complete the work as originally intended.

The contractors are happy. They have made much greater progress than they anticipated, and will, if nothing unforeseen occurs, finish their work long before the allotted time. There are 1,300 men on the pay roll, and an actual working force of 800 men, divided into two shifts, are working, one by day and the other by night, so that the work never stops except for meal hours.
Ten hours on, and ten off is the daily routine for each man. It makes no difference to him whether he works at night or in the daytime, for way down in the earth's bosom where he toils the darkness is not disturbed by a single ray of sunlight. Little wires threading the path of the great holes give out here and there dim sparks of electric light which twinkle like stars in the gloom.

On an average 1,400 pounds of dynamite are used every 24 hours, or a car load every 16 days. Enough dynamite to blow New York to kingdom come, if carelessly exploded on Broadway, is touched off down in the tunnel every week. This deadly explosive is received at the work in a frozen state and stored in a big magazine. From this receptacle it is taken to the tunnel house as needed. The tunnel house is a building separate from all others. Eight feet away from it is a fire-proof stove house, and heat is generated in the tunnel house by means of hot water.

The vast amount of work that remains to be done is a light task compared with what has already been accomplished. The great water race in which the huge turbine wheels will turn will be an elongated excavation accommodating four of the wheels in a row. The wheel pit will be about 170 feet deep from the surface of the ground to the point of discharge from the wheels. The actual water head will be about 140 feet. The canal which is to admit the water from the river to the wheel pits is more than 100 feet wide, and will have a water depth of 20 feet. This canal is fully half excavated, and the massive walls which will compose its sides and contain the gates for the control of the water supply, are progressing with all possible speed.

The undertaking of the Tunnel Power Company has stimulated the Niagara Falls Hydraulic Canal Company, and their old raceway is being dredged to carry a depth of twelve feet of water, about fifty feet wide. The wheels will be placed on the company property on the river bank not far from the mouth of the new tunnel. There is little room for factories there, but a huge battery of dynamites will be arranged for the conversion of the enormous power into electric force. In this manner, it is claimed, it is possible to develop nearly as much power as the tunnel enterprise now promises.

A TRAGIC AFFAIR.—A tragic tale comes from the village of Meragallino, in North Italy. Saccone, a farmer's son, was cannoried of a pretty grape picker named Bionda.
The girl was already betrothed to one Costa and rejected the advances of Saccone, who thereupon forced a quarrel with Costa, hoping to put him out of the way and then win Bionda for himself. It was agreed that the rival fighters should fight with pistols. The girl, learning of the rendezvous, planned to aid her lover, and hiding behind him she fired at Saccone at the signal. Costa fired at the same instant.
Saccone fell dead, pierced by Costa's bullet, but Costa also fell, his sweetheart's aim having been so true. The girl, seeing her lover overcome, struck him in the back of the head instead of reaching his intended victim. Most remarkable still, Saccone's bullet, missing Costa, buried itself in the bosom of the devoted maiden who had come to her lover's assistance. The doctors pronounced Costa wound mortal, but think that the girl may survive.
